

The Red Room November Newsletter

Hello Red Room families, November is here and along with it comes the season of thanks. We all have many things to be thankful for and it will be a topic of discussion this month in the Red Room. We will continue learning our letters- this month we will cover E thru H. Our morning routine will slightly change, instead of having the kids trace their name on tracing sheets - they will trace their name on the dry erase board. Their names will be written on the board with a light color marker and they will go over it with a dark color marker. The kiddos have been doing a great job tracing their names in the morning but I have noticed some of the kids have been rushing to finish in order to play with their friends. I don't want to make name tracing an arduous task, I would like to make it an enjoyable undertaking.

During this month the kids will learn about the first Thanksgiving. We will touch upon the Pilgrims and Native Americans first encounter. We will use this historic moment as a way to explain to the children how people with different backgrounds can come together and become friends. Throughout the month the kiddos will also do Thanksgiving art projects that will be displayed all over the classroom. The kids will continue learning their numbers and tracing them. They will continue to learn how to read their friends' names and will also have an opportunity to trace their friends' names. In this month the children will furthermore learn left and right, least and most, patterns and words that rhyme. It's going to be a fun month of November. The Red Room teachers are very excited to get it underway.
